For those of you that may have been confused by @SfNJournals decision to actively participate in fraud by exonerating $sava and surrendering their scientific integrity and voice to Remi, I put a helpful explainer here 🙄 cc: @MarinaP63 @JuanLerma1 @barry_everitt @SECEnfDirector

Getting your earliest publications with the Grand Poobahs of neuroscience certainly greases one's career path... does it also create a sense of indebtedness? 🙄

Article

Aug 1994

Lindsay H Burns · Barry John Everitt · Ann E. Kelley · Trevor W Robbins

Previous evidence suggests that glutamatergic limbic afferents participate in the potentiation of responding with conditioned reinforcement produced by intra-accumbens d-amphetamine. The present experiments were designed to investigate glutamate-dopamine interactions in the ventral striatum in both conditioned reinforcement and locomotor activity...

Intra-amygdala infusion of the N-methyl-D-aspartate receptor antagonist AP5 impairs acquisition but not performance of discriminated approach to an appetitive CS

Article

Jun 1994

Lindsay H Burns · Barry John Everitt · Trevor W Robbins

The present experiments investigated the effects of blocking glutamate transmission in the amygdala on the learning and subsequent performance of a discriminated approach response to food, as well as on locomotor activity and a test of neophobia to food. In the appetitive conditioning experiment, three separate groups of rats received intra-amygdala...

Dissociation in Effects of Lesions of the Nucleus Accumbens Core and Shell on Appetitive Pavlovian Approach Behavior and the Potentiation of Conditioned Reinforcement and Locomotor Activity by Amphetamine

Article

Full-text available

Apr 1999

John A Parkinson · Mary Olmstead · Lindsay H Burns · [...] · Barry John Everitt

Dopamine release within the nucleus accumbens (NAcc) has been associated with both the rewarding and locomotor-stimulant effects of abused drugs. The functions of the NAcc core and shell were investigated in mediating amphetamine-potentiated conditioned reinforcement and locomotion. Rats were initially trained to associate a neutral stimulus (Pavlo...

All this is not to say that having professional contacts is wrong, but rather let's not pretend for one minute that @SfNJournals "exoneration" of $sava was some disinterested 3rd party weighing the facts.. we can see the facts, this was something else (cc: @SECEnfDirector)

Valuations @valuations_ · Nov 24, 2021
Unless Picciotto received money from SAVA, there's no conflict to disclose. She has more integrity than you're giving her credit for. Neuroscience is a small universe... And of course Burns co-authored with her PI I'm sure you did the same, no? Thread is bordering on this:

The simple and reasonable question is: Did Prof. Everitt or Prof. Robbins communicate at all with anyone at J Neurosci regarding this case?

2

Valuations @valuations_ · Nov 24, 2021
They wouldn't even need to. I'm sure Picciotto knows Burns (at least her work), and that may have influenced the decision. But as Dr.Bik has highlighted, seems like the larger issue is most editors would rather ignore problems. Easier to kick the can.

1

2

Adrian H @Adrian_H · Nov 24, 2021
They didn't ignore problems or kick the can here. They issued a very unusual, premature statement with no basis in fact which was used to pump the stock.

1

3

Adrian H @Adrian_H · Nov 24, 2021
The fact that these players know and work with each other unusually closely should have made it immediately clear to J Neuroscience that their handling of these concerns needed to be very careful and transparent.

1

Valuations @valuations_ · Nov 24, 2021
But that's my point, it's not unusually close. It's small universe, Robbins and Everitt are giants in the field. Doesn't mean Picciotto is explicitly helping Burns and SAVA commit fraud, but might mean she's inclined to give the benefit of the doubt that it was simply a mistake.

3

Valuations @valuations_ · Nov 24, 2021
Aside from being EiC, she's a Yale researcher who probably teaches, and has a family etc, and a lot on her plate. Good chance she passed the review on to someone else and simply issued the statement. I think it's unfair to assume nefarious collusion.

2

Adrian H @Adrian_H
I'm not assuming anything. The statement put out by JN was patently ridiculous. The "original" blot provided in the Erratum was faked. They need to explain or correct their statement and Erratum, and explain the process that that led to it. @MarinaP63 $SAVA
